

Comfortable Eyewear Boosts Compliance Rates: Gateway Safety's Luminary™ Is a Star in Comfort and Protection

August 11, 2009—When you have to wear safety eyewear all day, every day, who doesn't want a safety product that helps eliminate headaches and discomfort?

Gateway Safety can help, with their NEW Luminary™ safety eyewear product. Soft, ultra-flexible temples relieve pressure behind the ears, enhancing worker comfort regardless of head size. A “fingertip” nosepiece reduces slippage, so glasses stay securely in place. Plus, at just four-fifths of an ounce, Luminary is ultra-light and will make workers forget that they're wearing protective eyewear at all.

Those same temples feature unique, translucent temple insets that match the color of the lens, giving Luminary cutting-edge style. With a high-end design that workers can't wait to wear, Luminary safety eyewear has star potential among your workforce. With a look, fit, and comfort that combine with exceptional safety features, Luminary will help dramatically improve worker compliance rates.

Of course, Luminary meets and/or exceeds ANSI Z87.1+ standards. However, Gateway Safety goes an extra step. Although it's not required by ANSI or OSHA, Gateway Safety has obtained independent, third-party certification on the Luminary, so you know that it's a good, safe durable product. A large, one-piece polycarbonate lens, with an integrated brow guard and protective wrap-around design, provide excellent coverage against workplace hazards. Luminary is available in a variety of contemporary lens colors, and an anti-scratch lens coating comes standard.
